History of the Zanesville Memorial Concert Band

Zanesville has a long and rich band history dating back to 1820, when Charles Hill formed the first reed and string band. Throughout the 1800s, numerous bands thrived in the community, the most notable of which was the Bauer Band. Led by John Bauer, the Bauer Band flourished between the mid-1800s and early 1900s and was well-known throughout Ohio, as well as neighboring states. Notable high-profile performances of the Bauer Band include the opening of the suspension bridge in Wheeling in 1849 and the funeral of Ohio-born Civil War General William Sherman in St. Louis in 1891. After John Bauer died in 1912, the Bauer Band was taken over by the American Rolling Mill Company and renamed the Armco Band. During this time, the 7th Regiment Band, part of the 7th Ohio Volunteer Infantry, Spanish-American War, was also active in Zanesville and was the chief rival of the Armco Band. It was the merging of the Armco Band and the 7th Regiment bands in 1923 that created the Memorial Band. This new Memorial Band was formed to play summer concerts in Zanesville that were funded by bequests of Eaton S. Drone and John Hoge. These early concerts took place twice weekly, in McIntire Park and Putnam Hill Park. Over the last 100 years, the Memorial Band has performed hundreds, if not thousands, of free concerts for the Zanesville community at various locations throughout the city, including several of the city's parks, the Helen Purcell Home, the Muskingum County Home, the Muskingum County Fairgrounds, Memorial Hall, Zane Trace Commemoration, and the banks of the Muskingum River. Notable out-of-town performances of the Memorial Band include an appearance at the Ohio State Fair in 1932 and a concert in 1943 for wounded veterans at Fletcher General Hospital in Cambridge, a hospital built by the U.S. Army during World War II to serve the war's sick and wounded service men and women. The current home of the Memorial Band is Zane's Landing Park, where it has performed since the mid-1980s, with support from the City of Zanesville. With a vision for passing along the community band tradition to future generations, the Memorial Band launched a high school honors band program in 2005. The honors band is comprised of select area high school students and traditionally performs on the first concert of the season. The Memorial Band continues to receive support from the Eaton S. Drone and John Hoge funds, in addition to other local grant sources. These grants and the generosity of individual and business patrons allow the Memorial Band to enthusiastically fulfill its primary mission—to provide free summer concerts to the Zanesville community.

Band Pays Way to Cambridge for Concert
At Hospital; Last Park Program Here Today

This photograph was taken at Putnam Hill park several weeks ago during one of the Memorial band's weekly concerts. Today marks the end of the summer park concert series.

The final concert of the annual Hoge-Drone series will be presented at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon in Putnam Hill park by the Zanesville Memorial Concert band which, on Monday evening, will donate its services — members even paying the cost of their own transportation — for a concert at Fletcher General hospital in Cambridge.

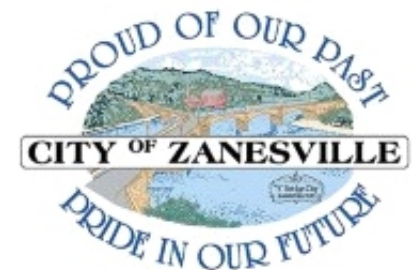

When it was disclosed that OPA regulations forbid the allowance of additional gasoline for their private cars, in order to make the trip to Cambridge, members of the widely known Zanesville band agreed yesterday to chip in and charter a bus to Cambridge where they will present the concert for wounded soldiers who are receiving treatment at Fletcher hospital. The presentation will take place in the Red Cross auditorium at the hospital. Paul A. Kern, the band director, has arranged a program which he considers especially appropriate for the occasion.

This afternoon's concert at Putnam Hill park concludes one of the most successful seasons in the band's history. Emphasis has been placed on marches and patriotic music, reflecting the war's influence, particularly in the encore numbers with which Director Kern and his musicians are liberal.

Member of Choir Writes Anthem

"The Savior," one of the anthems to be used at St. John's Lutheran church Easter Sunday morning, was written by Clarence E. Bauer, a member of the choir. He wrote both words and music and made the manuscript copies from which the choir will sing.

Coming from a family of musicians, his father was an outstanding member of the famous Bauer band, and the leader of that organization, it is not to be wondered that Mr. Bauer should produce a work which all the members of the church are enthusiastic over.

Mr. Bauer says he used to follow the band all over town and play a wooden piccolo while his father played a real one in the band and dream of the time when he would be a band leader and compose music for it.

An interesting feature in connection with the initial presentation of the anthem is that Saturday, March 31, is Mr. Bauer's birthday. He very facetiously said: "Just 63 years ago I opened my mouth with my first cry and now to think on the anniversary, a day later, I am going to open my mouth again for the first time to help sing my own composition in public."
